Micah's hearing loss will not hold him back on the first day of school

The smile on Micah's face says it all as he 'shows off' his new uniform in preparation for the first day at 'big' school.

For Micah's parents Louise and David Wedgwood this milestone is one that was originally fraught with uncertainty. Micah was born with hearing loss, identified at newborn hearing screening, and from four months of age has worn a hearing aid.

After trying other early intervention approaches, Micah's parents settled on Queensland based not-for-profit, Hear and Say's Early Intervention Program to receive hearing, listening and speaking, and social development support so that Micah's hearing loss would not hold him back.

Mum, Louise said, Hear and Say has been a 'one stop shop' providing audiology, speech and language therapy lessons, and LEAP playgroup program.

"David and I are very glad we called on Hear and Say's support and expert advice to give Micah every chance of fulfilling his potential. In all areas of his speech and language development, Micah is on par if not ahead of his hearing peers, and he is a happy and sociable little boy. We are very proud of him and feel confident he will do well when he starts Prep next week," Louise said.

Hear and Say's support of children like Micah doesn't end when they transition to school. Micah's Listening and Spoken Language Specialist, Ms Emma Fraser said, steps are in place to ensure that the school and his teacher are aware of his hearing loss; that sound acoustics in the classroom will be monitored; and that Micah is prepared to answer questions about his hearing aids and to speak up in class if he has difficulty hearing.

"We know that correct acoustics in the classroom will not just help Micah but benefit all children as well as reduce strain on the teacher's voice, a win-win for everyone in the classroom," Ms Fraser said.

About Hear and Say

Established in 1992 by Dr Dimity Dornan AO, Hear and Say today provides services and programs to children, young adults and families across five centres as well as a Telepractice programs reaching out to rural and remote families. Hear and Say also provides the 'Hear to Learn' School Hearing Screening Program and paediatric hearing services - as a child's hearing can change over time.

Our aim is to help all children to hear, listen and speak so they can attend a regular school, have wider career choices and can more fully participate in their community. Hear and Say interfaces state-of-the-art hearing technology (digital hearing aids and implantable technology such as cochlear implants) with the Auditory-Verbal Therapy approach.

As a not-for-profit organisation Hear and Say must raise more than $10,000 each year, for up to five years, to fill the funding gap so that one child with hearing loss can learn to listen and speak. Hear and Say is committed to using clinical research to measure outcomes and its success lies in the vital role that parents/caregivers play in teaching their children to listen and speak.
